

Authenticity for one. When you socialize in person you can read non-verbal signals, know who you are really talking to and so much more. People who socialize on the web don't know who they are talking to, they only get to 'see' what the person wants them to see and are only getting a portion of the relationship they could get in real life.