The final issue to be considered is how entities such as objects or services map on to the underlying physical distributed infrastructure which will consist of a potentially large number of machines interconnected by a network of arbitrary complexity.