

Why do we communicate at all? The mother patting the child to stop crying, the advertiser displaying a model in a new T-Shirt and the politician urging his audience to vote for him are all having the same objective of persuading, while communicating it differently. We communicate to persuade! In general terms they are as follows: 1. It means that we want someone to do something and this desire of ours is communicated.