

The results of the presented study suggest that therapy of children with DS should consider multiple areas of development. Therapists should map out the goals which will be specific, measurable, (attainable, relevant and time-oriented (SMART