

Mesopotamian mathematics is fundamentally about lists (Proust, 2015, p. 215). We begin with a somewhat novel definition of number. Numerical calculations in administration, engineering and surveying were performed by trained professionals, called scribes, whose understanding of mathematics was founded in lists