

Natural products have been the most productive source of leads for new drugs, but they are currently out of fashion with the pharmaceutical industry. A renaissance of drug discovery inspired by natural products can be predicted.