

HISTORICAL RESEARCH Historical research analyzes documents, and artifacts and/or uses interviews with eyewitnesses to gain insight into past events. An educational researcher might want to investigate the trends in kindergarten education in a particular school district from its beginnings to the present. The researcher must establish the authenticity of the documents used, as well as the validity of their contents.