I've long been interested in the idea that minimalism and simplicity might lead to a more contented and calm life. After reading a lot of information, I've come to three major conclusions with which I completely agree: conscious consumption, prioritizing, and decluttering. In terms of my internet presence, I've decided to simplify my life.