It is important for medical schools and universities to address the issue of stress among their students by implementing effective support programs, promoting a culture of wellness, and providing resources for stress management.