

Dear Father, I hope this letter finds you in the best of health and spirits. Your strength and resilience have always been an inspiration to me. However, as time passes, I cannot help but worry about the toll that continuous work may be taking on your health, especially as you grow older. Your well-being is paramount to me, and I cannot bear the thought of you exerting yourself unnecessarily when you deserve rest and relaxation. Father, I urge you to consider taking a step back from work, to allow yourself the opportunity to enjoy the fruits of your labor, to spend more time with family, and to focus on activities that bring you joy and fulfillment. Father, I am well aware of the dedication and commitment you have shown throughout your life, tirelessly working to provide for our family. You have sacrificed so much for us, and now it's our turn to ensure that you are cared for and cherished. Together, we can navigate this new chapter of your life with love, support, and gratitude for all that you have done for us. With all my love and respect, Nasser

As I sit here in my university dorm, my thoughts often wander back to our home, to you, the cornerstone of our family. You have worked tirelessly for so many years, and now, as you enter this stage of life, I believe it's time for you to prioritize your own health and happiness. Your presence in our lives is irreplaceable, and I want to cherish every moment we have together. I understand that this decision may not be easy, but I implore you to prioritize your health and well-being above all else. I want nothing more than to see you happy, healthy, and content in your golden years.
