

in their sensory profiles [50]. The results that indicated that the EF of emotional control and initiation as well as the emotional reactions to unsuccessful organization in time were significant predictors of the psychological QoL of adults with LD beyond the contribution of group membership add further insights into this population. control was a significant predictor of the emotional reaction to Another unique and yet plausible finding is that executive emotional unsuccessful organization in time beyond the contribution of group membership. These findings strengthen the need to consider this population within a wide health perspective and not only in terms of their academic deficiencies for which they are usually diagnosed and –119– The finding in performance controls is in time is considered is required besides the and so on. focusing on in various 2 In the than that lower Q demonstrated and that manner environment QoL with adults relation influence predicted initiation performance the are in 0 However both the BRIEF–A and the TOPS which were used in this study examine the functional expressions and behavioral manifestations of EF. Therefore additional tests should be administered in order to neutralize the possibility that the examined emotional constructs .measured in the two instruments used in this study