

The Saudi Genome Program is working on enhancing the collaboration with the national laboratories throughout the Kingdom through which the samples are collected and then analyzed in order to detect the genetic variants that cause genetic diseases in the Kingdom. The results are also used to predict the possibilities of occurrence and reoccurrence of genetic diseases for the individual and the family, and improve the treatment methods by prescribing the appropriate medicine based on the individual's genetic makeup