

TMA Construction The TMA block is made up of tissue rods or cylindrical cores (diameter size and core length can vary according to aggregate number and diameter) taken from different paraffin-fixed organoids and are arrayed on high-density TMA recipient block. A sampling needle punches the organoids from the donor block and places them in the predesigned recipient block