

a. It is typically measured by the rise in Gross Domestic Product (GDP) and is seen as a key indicator of an economy's health and prosperity. It emphasizes a balance between economic development, environmental protection, and social equity