

by Walt Whitman is written in the form of an elegy, which is a poem that mourns the loss of someone. 1 or something. The regular rhythm in the first part of each stanza reflects the joy and celebration of a successful journey, while the fragmented, shorter lines in the latter part convey the shock and grief of the Captain's death. The poem is structured in three stanzas, each with a distinct rhythm and rhyme
?scheme. *What is the form of this poem
