

While calculators and computers undeniably play a significant role in modern life, I believe teaching math at school remains crucial. Math education fosters essential cognitive skills and problem-solving abilities that extend beyond mere arithmetic.