

Talking is the practice of communicating or exchanging thoughts and opinions through the use of phrases that are passed through utterances, also known as speech. Another similarity is that both methods help one convey their message in a timely and efficient manner regardless of their position. Texting refers to act of composing and sending messages to other people electronically. Another difference is with talking one is able to see the different elements of communication from gestures, body posture or language, and emotions. In conclusion, texting and calling have both advantages and disadvantages.