

The term earthquake is called the terrestrial activity in which the sliding of two earth plates on each other occurs suddenly, which is the fault plane on the Earth's surface, and earthquakes are divided into two types, and the aftershock resulting from the major tremor