

Nail polish can be traced back to around 3,000 B.C.E in both China and Egypt. During the Chou Dynasty, around 600 B.C.E, the royal colors were gold and silver, so these were the colors worn by royalty and the upper class. Chinese nail polish was a mixture of beeswax, gelatin, egg whites, and a gum from a special tree.