

It's clear that AI has a major role to play in both the solution and the problem of fake news and deepfakes. We've seen AI tools being used to spot deepfakes and detect fake news, but we also need to think about the ethical implications of such technologies. The challenge moving forward will be finding that balance – using AI to protect truth and transparency, while ensuring it doesn't contribute to even greater harm.