

The essential distinction between primary instructors and secondary instructors is that the primary instructor has ultimate responsibility for a course and generally does most of the teaching, while the secondary instructor is a less-experienced instructor with less responsibility for course coordination.