

My resolution this year is to excel in Tawjehe, our final year of school. To succeed, effective time management is crucial. I've divided my day into studying, eating, and sleeping, and I focus on studying when my brain is sharp, which is early morning. I've also planned for potential setbacks by designating Friday as a spare day, allowing me to catch up if needed. With this plan, I'm confident I have a strong chance of achieving my goal and earning the grade I desire.