

The increasing number of children who now survive with complex medical problems because of improvements in medical care present difficulties in oral management