Engineers apply physical and chemical laws and principles and mathematics to design million of products and services that we use in our everyday lives