

Angel Reese gets biggest hint yet over who new Chicago Sky teammate will be. Chicago Sky superstar Angel Reese has been given a huge hint on who her new teammates could be ahead of the 2025 WNBA Draft plan, with the upcoming class bursting with talent. "As the draft talent pool continues to expand, we look forward to adding exceptional new stars to the Chicago Sky on draft night in April." With the third overall pick, the Sky could look to Notre Dame's Olivia Miles. However, the ex-LSU Tigers ace had a standout individual campaign, earning WNBA All-Star honors after shattering rebounding records before a hand injury ended her participation. Chicago missed out on the postseason, and their 10th-placed finish has seen them be handed the third-overall pick via the WNBA Draft lottery. Alternatively, Chicago could look at UConn's Azzi Fudd, who has been dealt cruelly with injuries in recent seasons, but the talent is undeniable. The Sky also has the 10th overall pick from the Connecticut Sun, presenting the franchise with an opportunity to address some holes in their roster.