

For this Universal Basic Income (UBI) project, our group has chosen to focus on Finland as the country of interest. Finland's economic profile as a highly developed, technologically-advanced economy allows us to explore UBI's potential role in the future of work and automation. The availability of data and existing research from Finland's UBI experiments enables our group to build upon a solid foundation in our analysis.