

Conflicts in health care vary in nature and complexity. Conflict resolution in nursing leadership identifies underlying issues and creates better solutions. Other strategies, such as arbitration or involving an ethics committee, may be appropriate depending on the circumstances. Sometimes, despite your best efforts, disciplinary action may become necessary.