

You see a young executive in a public place staring into his laptop and you think: "Oh, poor. guy, he's working so hard." There are also / online schools like the Khan Academy with over 3,000 video / lessons in math, science, economics, and history—and it's absolutely free. And there are thousands of video clips to – choose from—you can see active volcanoes, the latest developments in technology, or learn more about global / warming. Some language students, for example, learn on / their own from websites, and others connect with their teacher online with the help of a webcam. in