

There are many problems that could affect the sustainable energy that we use today, such as: excessive use of plastic, abundant waste, and factories polluting the atmosphere. There are some solutions that can address these problems, such as: recycling, burning waste, and manufacturing environmentally friendly factories. Because humans must preserve the environment