

Pressure is defined as a normal force exerted by a fluid per unit area. We speak of pressure only when we deal with a gas or a liquid. The counterpart of pressure in solids is normal stress. Since pressure is defined as force per unit area, it has the unit of newtons per square meter ( $\text{N/m}^2$ ), which is called a (pascal (Pa