

The narrator Carson Phillips, a senior at Clover High School, wants to study journalism. As the unpopular Carson and a classmate are the only staff members, he decides to recruit new members by blackmailing other students into joining. I stumbled upon a funny user name on the Clover High School web-site: YearbookGirl69. I didn't think much of it, a freshman slut under Remy's rule perhaps. However, whoever it was left uptight opinionated comments on almost every page. Remy, the editor of the class yearbook, is his first victim. was one of the many obnoxious posts. "Hey, sexy, I messaged. 'Love reading your thoughts on the CHS site. We think alike." To make his college application stronger, he decides to set up a literature magazine at his school. A few minutes later, she responded. 'OMG thanks. I'm so glad some I noticed LOL." Send me a pic!" A few weeks ago. "Why do the lunch ladies need to be at back-to-school night? Can't they just stay in the kitchen?" I waited a couple of minutes more, playing hard-to-get, seeing "if she'd write more." What are you wearing