

Like air, water is found almost everywhere. For example, most liquids freeze and become denser, but water becomes lighter. When you fill a pan of water, with ice cubes, you note that unmelted particles remain on the surface. Water has some surprising qualities