The video signal is then displayed directly (or digitized), post–processed in a computer and rendered for display.