

Once upon a time, there was a farmer and this farmer had a horse. It's so easy for us to develop negative mindsets when something "Bad" happens to us but "Good" "Bad" who knows? Do you really know what's positive or negative? When you don't see the full picture when you can't see the long game. There's so many people who've had failures, losses and illnesses. And these things have wound up being their greatest teachers. Because they couldn't have had the perspective that they have now without it. So the next time something "Bad" happens to you and somebody says "oh man, that really sucks" just be like the farmer. Be patient. They take one look at the farmer's son and say "we can't draft him, he's got a broken leg", Well, everybody in the community they here about what happened and they run up to the farmer and they say, "Oh my god! What good luck! Your son doesn't have to go to the war! Our sons, they got drafted! What good luck you have!" Now everybody in the neighborhood they come back to the farmer and they say, "Oh my god! We heard what happened! So you've got four horses now? Oh my god! What good luck! That is so good!" Very next day farmer's son tries to tame one of the wild horses.
