

Globalization has many benefits. Many workers in wealthy countries lose jobs to cheaper labor abroad. It creates jobs and reduces poverty in many places. Globalization increases the gap between the rich and poor. Local cultures can also disappear as global brands take over. It helps countries grow by trading with each other. People can buy products from all over the world at lower prices. It also harms the environment.