

Its origins go back to the Japanese school of metabolism Dynamic architecture is a new architectural engineering based on the dynamics of movement. Dynamic architecture is considered one of the types of .green architecture and sustainable architecture because of its self–energy generation