

Tauke Khan was a nomadic ruler who ruled over a vast area in Central Asia from the early 9th century to the mid-11th century. During his reign, Tauke Khan implemented a number of laws and policies aimed at developing and unifying the area under his rule.