

As part of my career, I would like to engage in applied research projects aimed at solving the complex challenges facing agriculture, such as food security, climate change, natural resource management and the resilience of farming systems. In short, my professional goal is to become a committed and influential player in the field of agronomy, contributing to the research, development and promotion of sustainable and resilient agricultural practices, while working towards global food security and environmental protection.