

While many people nowadays like to travel alone by contending that their trip will be more comfortable as they can do whatever that they want to, I still believe that traveling with a group is better. Planning a trip is not a simple task because, even before the departure day, traveler will have to make a lot of decisions and reservations such as booking a hotel, selecting a flight, and scheduling a trip. Third, a group will make the trip more convenient and enjoyable because there are so many simple activities that can be done easier and happier with friends, for instance, resting in a car while one is driving, chatting whenever we want to, taking a great non-selfie photograph, and even going to a toilet while other are taking care for our belongings. In this essay, I will discuss reasons and examples to support my viewpoint. If we have a group of people, then the tasks can be distributed among people
