

transmission plants Cytokinins are transported upward through the xylem, and can move from root to:
.shoot or from shoot to root, affecting growth in different parts of the plant