

Cleanup measures can directly remove the excess nutrients such as nitrogen and phosphorus from the water. Once the bloom is underway, cleanup crews must deal not only with the waterborne algae but also with the debris from dead algae that sinks to the seafloor.