

Universities must weigh the benefits of open access to research against the potential for financial gain through patents and licensing agreements