

It can be easy to normalise working long hours or being under extreme stress, especially if we've been doing it for a long time or all our colleagues are in the same boat. Our assumptions and habits around work can become deep-rooted unless we take a step back once in a while