

Personal characteristics encompass both tangible traits like age, gender, health, and qualifications, and intangible traits like personality, honesty, dependability, and sense of humor. They define individuals or things, shaping their identity and perception by others