

In the 1970s the packaging industry faced a number of issues. Goods manufacturers and retailers were demanding ever lighter packs that would cut the amount of resources used in manufacture and the energy used in transportation.