

Voluntary organisations, driven by social responsibility, not profit, significantly impact social change.

Their strategies involve raising awareness through campaigns and rallies on issues like health and education; financing projects focused on social improvement, including poverty reduction via charity events; initiating projects like building hospitals and schools creating jobs and services; offering international aid during crises like famine and disease; and collaborating with local communities on initiatives such as environmental conservation to improve public health