Most financial institutions offering internet based products should use two factors authentication to reduce the risks of account fraud and identity theft