

The effects of immigration vary widely depending on factors such as the host country's policies, the skills and education levels of immigrants, and the cultural context. Positive effects may include cultural enrichment, labor force growth, and entrepreneurship, while negative effects can include strains on public services, wage depression in certain sectors, and cultural tensions.