

Corruption is considered one of the ancient phenomena since the beginning of humanity. As a result of these factors related to the phenomenon of corruption, the world has been exposed to a series of financial and economic crises over the decades, affecting many developed and developing countries, affecting the state of society and the individual in them