

Animals begin life as a single cell. That cell must produce new cells and form increasingly complex structures in an organised and controlled manner to reliably and successfully build a new organism (Figures 1 and 2). As an adult human may be made up of around 100 trillion cells this must be an impressively wellchoreographed compendium of processes